An Army on Skates

During the famous expedition of Louis XIV this art of locomotion was adopted against the Dutch themselves, is one of the most curious and daring exploits recorded in history When the States sued for peace the terms offered by the pride of Louis were so monstrous that the people tried to open their sluices, and had the country under water The frost after a time, rendered even this unavailing and at length Luxembourg, one dark and freezing night mounted twelve thousand men upon skates and sent them over the ice from Utrecht to surprise the Hague The result is given as follows by a writer who takes his facts from a French historian

"When we left Utrecht, it was clear, frosty weather, and the effect of the moon and stars upon the even sheet of ice, over which they swept like a breeze was truly magical By degrees, as they advanced the visible horizon of earth was obscured by vapor and they could see nothing around above or beneath them, but a circular expanse of ice, bounded at the edge by thick gray clouds and canopied by the starry curtain of the sky The strange, resounding sound which ever and anon boomed along the frozen wilderness had at first something inexpressibly terrific to the imagination and as it died silently away in the distance, the space surrounding them seemed extended almost to infinity The sky at length was gradually covered by the vapors rising, as if from the edges of the circle of the earth a veil of dull and hazy white overspread the heavens and obscured the stars, and a dim round spot of watery brightness was the only indication of the site of the moon, by which alone they could now steer their course A rapid thaw had come on, their skates sunk deeper and deeper into the ice at every sweep, and at last, the water gathering upon the surface as it was agitated by the night wind that had now risen, assumed the appearance of a sea The wind increased, the sky grew blacker and blacker, their footing became more spongy and insecure they plunged almost to the knee, and the ice groaned and cracked beneath them Every one looked upon himself as lost, and the horrors of a fate hitherto untold in story and appearing to belong to other to the fortunes of the land nor of the sea, appalled the boldest imagination

"At length a faint, twinkling light appeared in the distance, sometimes seen and sometimes lost in the varying atmosphere, and they hail the satisfaction, such as it was, of at least knowing the relative bearings of the place on which they were about to perish The light proceeded from a strong fort in the enemy's hands, impregnable without cannon, and what added bitterness to their misery was the knowledge that beyond this fort was a dyke which in all probability afforded a path, however, narrow and muddy by which they could have returned to Utrecht The fort, however, was the gate to the avenue of safety and if they had possessed the requisite means of siege would either be swallowed up by the water, in the continuance of the thaw, or perish miserably through cold and fatigue But anything was better than inaction The water creeping insidiously around them was a deadlier enemy than stone walls or cannon shot and they determined at least to make a rush upon the immovable masonry of the fort and provoke the fire of its defenders It is impossible to account for the result It may have been that the sight of so large a body of men rushing in upon them, as if from the open sea, their number multiplied, and even their individual forms distorted and magnified in the mist, struck a panic terror into the hearts of the garrison, while this may have been increased by the shouts of courage or wildly over the icy waste, and mingling like voices of demons with the rising wind But, however this was, the gates of the fort opened at their approach, and the hapless and half frozen adventurers rushed in without striking a blow."

COMMERCE OF THE WORLD.—France exports wines, brandies, silks fancy articles, jewelry, clocks, watches, paper, perfumery, and fancy goods generally

Italy exports corn, oil flax wines, essence, dye stuffs, drugs, fine marble, soap, paintings, engravings, mosaics and salt

Prussia exports linens, woolen, zinc, articles of iron, copper and brass, indigo, wax, hams, musical instruments, tobacco, wines and porcelain

Germany exports wool, woolen goods, linens, rags, corn, timber, iron, lead, tin, flax, hemp, wines, wax, tallow and textiles

HABIT OF TELEPER.—An English critic writes as follows apropos to the appearance of the "Bijou" edition and the two hundredth thousand of Tupper's Proverbial Philosophy

We were about to make some idle remarks upon this wonderful work when we happened to open the volume and lighted by accident upon the following lines

Cause fond caroller at wisdom to be satisfied that everything is wrong be sure that there is good cause why for every thing, even for the hour taking of oral

Now accept at once the Essay Impromptu and feel assured in the exercise of faith rather than reason that there is good necessity for the flourishing of Proverbial Philosophy We hope that we shall thus escape the designation of "fond caroller, and in the full conviction that whatever is right even the issue of 200 000 copies of this work in question must be one by which we may be satisfied of all her children, the 200,000 purchasers included, though we do not see quite how

The Battle of Long Island

Thomas W Field has recently read before the Brooklyn Historical Society a series of interesting and important historical papers, designed to include all the important events occurring between the landing on Long Island of the British and the Hessians on the 22d of August, 1776, and the retreat of the Americans across the East River on the morning of the 30th

To Long Islanders, as well as most others of the reading world, the great struggle of those few days has been almost as much of a myth as the siege of Troy Had the same important historic event occurred on the soil of the New England or Southern States, monuments would have been reared to commemorate, and volumes printed to illustrate its notable incidents

The loyalty of the mass of Long Islanders to the British crown, and the fact that the heroic deeds performed on their soil were done by citizens of other States, may in some degree account for this

The author of these papers has developed some curious facts relating to the principal characters who were actors in the scenes of that week of battles He traces the failure of General Howe to carry the Brooklyn intrenchments by assault, to the indolence induced by his debaucheries The wife of Loring, the wretch whom Howe made commissary of prisoners, was the mistress of the British General, and with him in the camp on Long Island

At the gaming table where Howe was nightly present his paramour is charged with having lost in a single sitting fifteen hundred dollars The tardiness of Admiral Howe to sail his fleet past the batteries, covering both shores of the East River, is accounted for by the terrible repulse of Sir Peter Parker before Fort Moultrie just a month previously Mr. Field traces the vacillating patriotism of General Joseph Reed to the terror inspired by the imminent dangers which threatened to engulf the American cause in the day of the retreat From that time General Putnam feared to be a great hero, and was never after entrusted with an important command General Mifflin who afterwards entered into the cabal against Washington, is seen here to have found the first cause for his dislike, in a heated altercation which occurred between

The Daily Oregonian.

TUESDAY MORNING, DEC. 25, 1866.

Christmas.

There is a day on which a common festival is kept by all Christian nations. Differences in creeds, doctrines, tenets and beliefs do not prevent the common observance of the day of the nativity. From the olden time hallowed memories associated with this festival have come down to us. True, the delightful old fables of centuries ago in regard to the propitiousness of the time, and concerning the blessed spirits that were popularly believed to preside over the festivities of the day, are heard no longer; but Christmas still possesses something of the interest with which in a more superstitious age it was always surrounded. There are numerous old legends which relate how this day was regarded as a blessed time. In "Hamlet" we have an allusion to some of these traditions. On the first appearance and departure of the ghost in that celbrated play, Marcellus says:

> It faded on the crowing of the cock.
> Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes
> Wherein our Savior's birth is celebrated,
> This bird of dawning singeth all night long.
> And then they say no spirit dares stir abroad;
> The nights are wholesomer, then no planets strike,
> No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
> So hallowed and so gracious is the time.

Traditions like these have long since ceased to be popularly repeated; and except in a few localities, are perhaps never mentioned or heard. To keep alive those sensibilities and emotions which in a calculating age are fast perishing away, we might wish that we could still surround Christmas scenes with all the interest they once possessed. It used to be said that a Christmas gambol was sufficient to cheer a poor man's heart through half the year. In those times the season of festivity lasted until the twelfth night, or the night of the 6th of January, and every day was a holiday. It was by the poor that Christmas was then hailed with the greatest delight. Their's was a peculiar gladness. In our country the day has never, perhaps, been regarded with the interest with which it is anticipated and enjoyed in many parts of Europe. But still it is a holiday which is commonly observed in all parts of our country. Its observance which was once unusual in New England (as the Puritans sternly frowned upon Christmas pastimes) is becoming much more common than it was some generations ago.

The Last Case of Impeachment.

The last case of impeachment by the House of Representatives was that of Judge Humphreys of the District Court of the United States for one of the Districts of Tennessee. The impeachment took place while Andrew Johnson was Military Governor of that State, and Mr. Johnson was prime mover in the proceedings. In May, 1862, the Senate commenced the trial of Judge Humphreys. The principal charge preferred was as follows:

"That, regardless of his duties as a citizen of the United States, and unmindful of the duties of his said office, and in violation of his sacred official oath, he, the said West H. Humphreys, on the 20th day of December, A. D. 1860, in the city of Nashville in said State, the said West H. Humphreys then being a citizen of the United States, and owing allegiance thereto, and then and there being Judge, &c., at a public meeting on the day and year last aforesaid, held in said city of Nashville, and in the hearing of divers persons there present, did endeavor by public speech to incite revolt and rebellion within said State, against the Constitution and Government of the United States, and did then and there publicly declare that it was the right of the people of said State, by an ordinance of secession, to absolve themselves from all allegiance to the Government of the United States, the Constitution and the laws thereof."

The accused was pronounced guilty of the offence charged above, and for this he was declared to be no longer a judge of the District Court of the United States. The Chicago Tribune in speaking of this trial notes some things that are especially to be observed. First, Andrew Johnson was the chief instigator of the proceedings. Second, Judge Humphreys "was impeached by a House of Representatives from which ten States were excluded; he was impeached by a House of Representatives in which he had no Representative, and in which only a small portion of the people of Tennessee could be heard." He was impeached by a 'Rump Congress'—by a body 'hanging on the verge of the Government,' and 'calling itself the Congress of the United States.' He was tried by a Senate in which eleven States had no members. He was tried by a Senate from which eleven States, entitled to twenty-two votes, were excluded. He was tried by a Senate which, had these twenty-two votes been present, would not have convicted him. He was impeached by a House, and tried by a Senate into either of which no member from ten States could have been admitted."

If Mr. President Johnson should ever make it necessary for Congress to impeach him, the above case would furnish some very valuable precedents. As he himself urged the impeachment of a Judge by a Congress in which "ten States were not represented," he would, in case of any misdemeanor on his part such as he has threatened more than once, have a fine opportunity to see the excellent effects of a rule which he aided to establish.

Determined to Make Out a Case.

Judging from the importunity with which the Copperheads press their point, it seems to be reasonably certain that they will never cease to insist that the surrender of the rebels was conditioned on a promise that all who had participated in the rebellion were to be immediately reinstated in their political rights and privileges. Historical facts are conveniently ignored to make out a case of this kind. It goes for nothing that President Lincoln just before the surrender of Lee instructed General Grant to hold no conference with the rebel leader except on some purely military matter. "You are not to decide, discuss or confer"—wrote Mr. Lincoln,—"upon any political question. Such questions the President holds in his own hands, and will submit them to no military conferences or conventions.". It goes for nothing that the substance of this letter was reiterated by President Johnson in his dispatch annulling Sherman's agreement with Jo. Johnston, in North Carolina. The sole reason why this agreement was set aside was because it embraced more than military conditions. But these facts the Copperheads, for the sake of their theory, find it very convenient to disregard entirely. There is probably no remedy for this disposition to make out a case, even at the expense of truth, for their friends who were embraced in the surrender.

ANOTHER WAR BOOK.—The ex-rebel General J. B. Hood proposes to write a book. He publishes a circular in the New Orleans Crescent, addressed to the officers who served under his command during the war, requesting them to collect and forward materials for his work, and concluding in these words:

"I wish to devote the time I can spare from my business to relate, with the directness and brevity of a soldier, what I saw on many battle-fields and arduous campaigns, and the part my comrades performed."

A candid recital of what Hood "saw on many battle-fields," says the New York Evening Post, would bean interesting narrative. What he chiefly saw was a storm array of patriotic soldiers, whose fire mowed down his own troops; and what our boys saw was Hood's defeat, and the field strewn with the bodies of thousands of his troops, whom he led, bravely enough, but foolishly, to a dreadful slaughter. His own account of those disastrous defeats will be a curious contribution to our war history.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 20, 1866.

As the majority of the people of Oregon have but an imperfect idea of the government departments in this city and the manner of doing business in them, it is important that some data should be presented on this subject—but as it would require much space for a full and detailed account, I will only endeavor to present a general outline. The city of Washington covers a very large space of country in proportion to the population, owing to the great width of the streets and avenues, and the disconnected and disjointed manner in which it is built up, and is divided into two parts—the eastern and western. The eastern part is built on a high plateau, and the western part—next the Potomac river—on a low uneven plain, with a dirty slough running through the southern part. The Potomac river bounds it on the south or south-west. Rock Creek on the north-west, a range of hills on the north, and the eastern branch of the Potomac on the east. The direction of its greatest length is north-west and south-east—the Potomac running in that direction—its length being about four miles and a half, and its width about two miles and a half. Near the centre of the city, and on the very brink or west side of the plateau on which the eastern part of the city is built, stands the capital, in the midst of a square, being the finest building of the kind in the world. Extending directly west from the capitol to the Potomac river is a wide strip of public ground known as the Mall—on which the Smithsonian Institute stands, and on which are situated the public gardens for raising flowers for Congressional bouquets, and hot houses for exotic plants. One mile and a quarter south-west of the capitol stands the White House near the centre of the north end of a public square, containing twenty acres—called President's Square. The streets are laid out at right angles direct with the points of the compass—those running north and south being numbered—beginning at the Capitol and running eastward on the Capitol hill—and beginning at the Capitol and running westward throughout the western division; and those running east and west are designated by the letters of the alphabet, beginning also at the Capitol on both the north and south sides, while the avenues, representing the thirteen original States by name, run diagonally across the city in all directions, centering principally at the Capitol and the President's Square. Pennsylvania Avenue extends from the south-east to the north-west end of the city, in a straight line, the Capitol Square and the President's Square connecting across this avenue.

The public buildings in which the business of the Government is transacted, consist of the Capitol, White House, Treasury Department, Interior Department, State Department, Postoffice Department, War Department and Navy Department, and sub departments belonging to these.

The Capitol is 745 feet 8 inches long and 324 feet deep through the wings; the old building being 290 feet wide, and contains the halls of the Senate and House of Representatives, with their various committee and document rooms, the library of Congress, the Supreme Court room (in the old Senate Chamber), art gallery of statuary (the old House of Representatives), the court of claims room, with halls, corridors, galleries, files rooms, and a virtuous Roman lady on the pinnacle of the dome. In the north-east corner of the President's square stands the Treasury Department, built of solid granite, 457 feet long and 270 feet wide, six stories high. This includes the Secretary's office, with 239 male and 16 female clerks; the loan branch with 79 male and 11 female clerks; Redemption Division with 12 male and 103 female clerks; First Controller, 29 clerks; Second Controller, 99 male and 13 female clerks; First Auditor, 41 clerks; Second Auditor, 455 clerks; Third Auditor, 325 clerks; Fourth Auditor, 110 male and 16 female clerks; Fifth Auditor, 40 clerks; Sixth Auditor (in Postoffice Department), 171 clerks; Treasurer's office, 130 male and 23 female clerks; Register's office, 147 male and 10 female clerks; Commissioner of Customs, 24 clerks; Solicitor's office, 20 male and 2 female clerks; Controller of the Currency; 52 male and 48 female clerks; Internal Revenue, 103 male and 60 female clerks; Lighthouse Board, 8 clerks—in the aggregate, 2,183 male and 342 female clerks—2,495 in all, at a cost of about $3,500,000 per annum as salaries.

The White House, in this square, about two hundred yards from the Treasury Department, is 180 feet long and 89 wide, and built of free stone and painted white, in which the President resides and in which he has his executive office with his four private secretaries and several clerks, and where he transacts all executive business.

Against the east of the Treasury Department stands the old State Department, having thirty clerks. It is 160 feet long and 55 feet wide, built of brick, and is now being torn down in order to complete the north end of the Treasury building which will cover its present site. The State Department is being removed—temporarily—about one mile and a half directly north, into the new Orphan Asaylum,, where business in that department will be transacted till a new building is erected for the department.

The War and Navy Departments are located also in this square, on the west side or southwest corner, being a large four story brick building painted brown, in which are employed hundreds of clerks. The Quartermaster General's office, the Ordnance office and the Surgeon General's office are buildings on the outside and near this square.

The Interior Department stands north of Pennsylvania Avenue—about equi-distant from the Capitol and President's Square, and is built of marble, being 410 feet long and 275 wide, and contains the Secretary's office, with 42 clerks, the Revenue Land Office, 143 clerks—the Patent Office, with 99 clerks and a immense saloon, containing all the models of patents and inventions in the United States—Indian Office, with 38 clerks—Pension Office, with 171 clerks, 493 in all. This Department also has supervision of the Capitol Police, Columbia Deaf and Dumb Institution, Washington Aqueduct, Hospital for Insane, Metropolitan Police, Superintendent of Public Printing, and the Department of Agriculture, Census, etc. Across the street from this Department stands the Post Office Department—204 feet long, and 102 feet wide, and runs its business with 167 clerks, about 30 of whom are females.

All business transacted with the Government must go through one of these departments, and all communications to the Government on business is referred to their appropriate departments, where they are distributed to the various bureaus and divisions to be registered, and then commence a series of red tape evolutions too numerous and complicated to be described, yet cannot be avoided; and they must be put through in their regular order, which sometimes requires years. And when people send their business communications to their representatives in Congress they have to file them in their proper department, and in many instances it becomes necessary to follow them through half a dozen bureaus, which occupies a great deal of their time, and is by no means a pleasant duty to perform.

And as many persons seem to think that all a Senator or member of Congress does here is to make speeches in Congress and eat State dinners, where there is an abundance of champagne and elegantly dressed ladies, I will give them an account of the style and amount of business attended to by one of your Senators who stands first among the representatives from the Pacific coast, as a man of business and influence. I mean Senator Williams. As a Senator from Oregon, he has to look after the interests of that State in Congress, and is a member of the Finance Committee—one of the most important Committees of the Senate—requiring a vast amount of work. He is also a member of the Committee on Claims, and aside from attending the regular weekly meeting of the Committee, he receives every week a half bushel basket full of claims which have been presented against the Government, and to-quire a thorough examination and much running among the departments. He is also a member of the Retrenchment Committee which requires the taking and sifting of much testimony, and the devising of various means for reducing the expenses of the Government; also a member of the Reconstruction Committee, which requires much investigation on the state of the country by testimony and otherwise. Then there is the distribution of thousands of documents, and receiving from one to a dozen letters a day which require answering. Add to this looking after claims against the Government presented by his constituents, which requires much running from one department to another,—situated at such great distances—and being importuned by office-seekers from all parts of the country with all degrees of merit and portinacity, one can scarcely see where he gets time to smoke his cigar and read the morning papers—leaving out all the other luxuries of a Christian life. During the recent canvass in New York, he took an active part in favor of the Union party, devoting several weeks to stumping the State, during which time a large amount of business and correspondence accumulated on his hands, which has taken all of his time and that of a clerk, to dispose of preparatory to the meeting of Congress.

Politics ceases to have any excitement, and office-seeking is pretty well "played out" at present, while there is every prospect of a great change on the part of the Administration towards the Radical Restoration plan, and universal amnesty and impartial suffrage, which, sooner or later must be adopted.

DOGBERRY.

BY STATE TELEGRAPH.

CANYONVILLE, Dec. 21, 1866.

Twenty feet of snow has fallen on Scott's Mountain during the last five days. It will be impossible to tell when the line can be got up. They have not been able to cross yet, and it was still snowing this morning.

FLOGGING IN THE BRITISH NAVY.—The practice of flogging still exists in the British navy. A recent application of the cat-o-nine-tails is narrated by a seaman on board one of Her Majesty's guard'ships, and published in the London Sun. So cruel and disgusting was the work, that the executioner fainted at his task, and for this weakness, this involuntary manifestation of human feeling, was himself threatened with the "cat." The sailor writes:

"I am sorry to tell you that I saw a poor fellow flogged on board this week. It was for desertion. He had four dozen lashes. It was horrible to look at, but we had to be all deck to witness it. His cries were dreadful to hear, and his poor back was torn to pieces. It was the two boatswain's mates that flogged him. They had to give him two dozen apiece. The first one flogged him all right, but I could see the other one trembled very much when it came to his turn to flog: and he took the cats in his hand and made two lashes at him, when the cats fell out of his hand on the deck, and he could hardly stand. So as soon as the captain saw this he bawls out to him, 'Take them up and do your duty or I will flog you.' The poor fellow took cats up again and made two more attempts to flog him, but he could not do it; so they had to get another man to come and do it, and the other poor fellow is put down in the cells to wait to be tried by a court-martial for refusing to flog the man. I thought our captain was a very nice man, but after what I saw of him on Monday he seemed to be the biggest brute I ever saw. I believe if it had been in his power he would have had the other man tied up, and, without trial, have flogged him also."

WENDELL PHILLIPS.—The opponents of the Republican-Union party have always endeavored to fix upon that party responsibility for what is said and done by Wendell Phillips. Here is a paragraph from the New York Tribune on this eccentric individual:

Mr. Phillips has always hated the Republican party. He hated it when it proposed only to resist the extension of slavery; because it did not insist on abolition; and, when in the fullness of time it insisted on abolition, he hated it by so much the more. When Mr. Lincoln was first a candidate for President, Mr. Phillips denounced him as "the slavehound of Illinois;" and when Mr. Lincoln had dealt slavery its death blow by his Proclamation of Freedom, Mr. Phillips denounced him with still harsher terms and opposed his re-election. Mr. Phillips' mischievous vaunt that he had "watered" the good, great President did not preclude his trying to deprive him of public confidence and votes. Had barely one thousand Abolitionists been fit to be guided by the Boston orator, McClellan would have been elected, and the downfall of American slavery indefinitely postponed."

A telegram dated Yreka, December 7th, says the weather is cold and disagreeable. The snow is two feet deep on the mountains. We have had two weeks of almost constant rain or snow. The stages are arriving from twelve to twenty hours behind time.

AT PRIVATE SALE.—Mr. Cohen having sold at auction the greater part of his stock of jewelry, will dispose of the balance on very favorable terms at private sale, until New Year. He has yet on hand a choice lot of ladies' jewelry, such as finger and ear rings, breast-pins, neck chains, lockets, etc.

HOLIDAY PRESENTS.—WEIL BROS. have a large and varied assortment of fine dress goods—such as Moire antique silk dresses, French and Irish poplins, etc.—which they are selling off at cost, affording an excellent opportunity for the purchase of HOLIDAY PRESENTS. They also offer, at cost, the choicest stock of custom-made clothing and Gents' furnishing goods.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR!—ELLSWORTH & CARDWELL, 93 First Street, (Post Office Block) would call attention to the fact that it is customary to present those you call on New Year's Day with your PICTURE. Now those who are not supplied with CARTES DE VISITE, AMBROTYPES, SUN PEARLS, and other specimens of PHOTOGRAPHIC ART, would do well to call at their GALLERY at once. Negatives taken in any kind of weather.

OPPOSITION ON THE COLUMBIA!—It rumor may be believed, there will be a line of opposition steamers from Portland to the Dalles, which will make lively times on the river and reduce fare to such low rates that everybody will have an opportunity to travel, as well as everybody has an opportunity to buy a good suit of clothes now of KOHN & FISHEL, No. 111, Front street—they selling cheaper than can be purchased elsewhere.

PICTURE GALLERY.—W. B. JONES having taken the gallery corner of Front and Morrison streets, Portland, would announce to the public that he is making PHOTOGRAPHS from Locket to Life size, AMBROTYPES, MELAINOTYPES, SUN PEARLS, and CARTE DE VISITE, plain or enameled, in the best style of the art. If you want card pictures with the most beautiful enamel, at lower prices than can be had in the city or State, go to JONES' GALLERY, corner of Front and Morrison.

TUESDAY MORNING, DEC. 25, 1866.

CITY.

CHRISTMAS.—This morning we give to all a "merry Christmas." Yesterday evening all was jollity and good humor. The last few days all the business men in the city have decked their stores in holiday attire, and placed in bold relief their best and most attractive wares. Articles of fruit, jewelry and all kinds of keepsakes, command a high premium. On last evening the churches and public halls of the city were crowded with laughing, merry crowds, who seemed to have banished far away all thought of care or business—all that would mar the brightness of the hour. The churches, halls, and houses, in accordance with the time honored custom, are dressed, festooned and decorated with evergreens. The closed doors are thrown open, and the little folks crowd forward to see the long-expected "Christmas Tree." It appears brilliantly lighted, and its branches loaded and bending beneath the load of presents designed to make the hearts of the recipients leap with joy, nor are "children of a larger growth" forgotten; they, too, receive presents from their friends, which will be treasured up and kept in memory of the giver. We are becoming somewhat imbued with the German spirit in regard to the festivities of this occasion. Each year we seem to go further into the spirit in which it is celebrated in the old countries." Our cosmopolitan population does more probably towards this end than any other cause. Every worldly of the opinion that it is good taste for us as Americans to go still farther, and more fully forget our old Puritanical training. Christmas festivities and customs spring from the best and most unselfish motives, and we say "God speed" to anything which will, even for a few days, give us rest from the rapid pace with which we are travel upon this coast in pursuit of money. We live too fast, and go too rapidly here to live to a ripe old age, and become old-mannish proportions. The various Christmas Trees and the several places of public resort, are too numerous to be individually mentioned.

THE CHILDREN'S FESTIVAL.—The pastor, teachers, and friends of the children of the M. E. Church Sabbath School prepared a festival at Oro Fino hall last evening for the little ones, and judging from their excellent behavior and the manner in which they rendered their declamations, dialogues and music, they certainly deserved the great pains that had been taken to please them; and their happy faces evinced the fact that they appreciated it very highly. Where all (also well as one should be mentioned in particular but we were much entertained with the recitation of Master Joey Hamilton, the chief of the "Orphan Boys of Switzerland," by Masters Harry Bennett and Hubert Northrup, and the dialogue and singing by Misses Louise Graden, Alida Johnson, Maria Gibson, Katie Wetzen, Sally Campbell and Nancy Taylor. There was a bountiful supply of cakes and confectionery, and the little folks done them justice. May they see many more such happy nights.

LARGE HOG.—We were shown last evening, at the Empire Market, by Mr. A. H. Johnson, a very large hog, weighing 750 lbs. This is a very respectable sized porker for "Web Foot," when we take into consideration the fact that he was but two years and a half old. This hog was presented to Mr. Johnson two and a half years ago by Thos. Cross, of Salem. The stock, we believe, is Berkshire and Irish Grazier. Mr. Cross has acquired already a reputation of one of Oregon's most enterprising and successful stock raisers, and has at every State Fair contributed largely to the stock on exhibition. The Empire and Pacific Markets present a very attractive appearance, being filled with the most attractive meats—enough to make a gourmand's mouth water—the various forms of nice steaks and sweet, juicy roasts, all through his liberal patronage. Mr. Johnson informs us that of the number of hogs for sale in his shops, none weigh less than 1000 lbs.

CHRISTMAS BALL.—Let all who wish to "trip the light fantastic" remember the ball given at the Dancing Academy of Mr. C. Cardinell, on this evening. The Dancing Academy has been made a successful institution, under the management of Mr. Cardinell, and we have no doubt that this ball will show that many of the young ladies and gentlemen by their instructions and become adepts in the "graceful art."

THE HUNT.—The steamer Wilson G. Hunt brought last evening from the Dalles about fifty passengers. There was a connection with the boats above, yesterday. There has been no connection before since Thursday last. The boats usually connect three times each week. There will be a connection again to-day. The steamer O. S. N. Co.'s wharf a large lot of cattle which will be shipped up the river by this morning's boat.

CHRISTMAS EVE.—The universal merry-making time was duly improved by our people last evening. We are informed, that the Congregational Society gave the children of the Sabbath School a pleasant surprise at the Church. Also that the Order of Good Templars had a festival of their own. We could not get the time to visit them all, consequently cannot speak of them as they merit deserves.

THE MESSENGER.—The messenger of Wells, Fargo & Co. brought last evening from the North, $30,000 in treasure.

SLEIGHING.—The season is so far advanced that travel from the mountains is generally supposed to have ceased, we still see sleighing with their golden store. Last evening's boat from the Dalles brought quite a number of returning goldseekers who seem to have been well rewarded for their toil.

POLICE COURT.—In Police Court, yesterday, before Judge Hoffman, we have but one case, and that will not suffice to make a respectable item. Said person had imbibed too freely of "chain lightning," and indulged in boisterous and disorderly conduct on Second street. He was fined $15 and costs.

MORNING PRODUCE.—The steamer Senator brought, last evening, from Oregon City, 22 sacks flour, 1068 boxes apples, 1 roll oil cloth, 1 copper boiler, 37 half bbls butter, 37 bundles trees, 10 boxes moles, 3 bales woolen goods, 10 Boxes lard, 25 half bbls lard, 2 kegs butter, 2 kegs butter and 2 boxes eggs.

A HORSE.—We are informed that Messrs. Bennett & White have sold their livery stable to Mr. John Taylor, or rather, "Jack," there has been an exchange of the livery stable for the Patton House and other property.

TEMPERANCE LECTURE.—Capt. Adams will deliver a lecture before the Good Templars, on Wednesday evening next, at the invitation of Multnomah Lodge, at 7 o'clock, in the Methodist Church.

NO DOUBT.—The steamer Oriflamme is now due, but not as all at the time of going to press.

SANTA CLAUS.—Santa Claus has arrived and has located himself at the store of Barman Bros. They have the best goods, and sell at the lowest prices. If you want to dress for any of the coming festivities go and see their well selected stock of the best and latest styles.

THE guest at the festival given by the Good Templars on last evening, who made the extraordinary mistake of taking his old, light colored wool hat for a new oil dressed hat, will do well to call at the Western Hotel and rectify the error.

FROM WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Our Olympia correspondent writes under date of the 20th inst.:

Olympia is lively and gay. The town is full to overflowing with people—every hotel and boarding house crowded. All these must have some way of passing the time, and some amusement, and as outside of the great "source of jocularity"—the Legislative halls—comes a continual string of entertainments, one after another, with a long line of them in prospect for the holidays. The most numerous of these are balls, concerts, lectures and fairs. Everybody goes to something; we all pay our money and we take our choice.

Last Friday the Methodist people had a "sociable" which means, four bits for church purposes, two cups of ice cream, and a walk home with the "gals." To-night there is an exhibition of the Sabbath School, being the closing exercises of the quarter.

The Brass Bell Ringers have been here for a couple of weeks, playing occasionally. On Saturday evening next, they propose to give a "Grand Christmas Holiday Festival" at the Capitol Hall. After their concert of bell ringing, etc., they distribute gifts of gold coin, jewelry, and a list of articles which must be given in full to be appreciated, and which has never been equalled since a theatrical company went to the Tahiti Islands, several years ago, and received for one night's entertainment about six tons of fruits and vegetables; so much that they were detained three weeks to eat it up. Here is the list: "One turkey, two pairs chickens, two sacks flour, and twenty other useful and beautiful articles, tea, coffee, sugar, ham, and other household goods, too numerous to mention." Besides, they will give a new ball piece, entitled "Gov. Pickering's Parade March," etc., etc. It is hardly worth while to mention that the agent is Tyler, formerly a typo, and known in Portland, as he has "an eye to biz."

It would seem that the Legislature does not "run" well, although it is big enough and old enough. Here is one instance, which has been the cause of some fun and a good deal of disgust. The Council sent a message to the House, and the latter being in committee of the whole, the Speaker refused to receive it. At this, the Council convened the Speaker of the House, upon which the House gets the sulks and goes up resolutions condemning the Council. The affair was decidedly humiliating, and undoubtedly was the result of the ambition of some of the Speaker. The whole Legislature is a slow coach, anyway, and will do little else but provide for the next biennial session of the Legislature, draw their greenbacks, and adjourn.

Olympia Lodge No. I, A. F. & A. M. elected the following officers on Monday evening last, for the ensuing Masonic year: Thomas M. Reed, W. M.; J. S. Chapman, S. W.; J. M. Myers, J. W.; Chas. E. Williams, Treasurer; J. P. Hyland, Secretary; A. Ferguson, Tyler.

Dr. G. K. Willard, an old and esteemed citizen, died yesterday morning at the residence of his son, Dr. Rufus Willard, in this place, and was buried this afternoon at the Masonic Cemetery, with Masonic honors.

We have been favored with a few extraordinary high tides for a few days, some eight inches higher than ever before known, caused by strong southwest winds on the coast. Some little damage has been done to sidewalks, and some trouble has been caused in the removal of the contents of some low buildings, but nothing material.

The Graefenberg Company's Uterine CATHOLICON does not contain one particle of calomel or mercury, and cases of Female Complaints which require other treatment than the Catholicon are extremely rare. It should be used in all cases of Deranged Monthly Periods, Weakness, Irregular Appetite, Nervousness, Headache, Disturbed Sleep, Acid Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion and Pains and Difficulties connected with the Uterine Organs.

THE UTERINE CATHOLICON

Is a most successful remedy for Gravel and all affections of the Kidneys and Bladder, while in the troublesome symptoms attending Pregnancy, the benefits of the Catholicon are most remarkable. It is a perfect restorer to functional and general health from building womanhood to the turn of life, and those patients who have used the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S UTERINE CATHOLICON find difficulty in expressing their thankfulness for the beneficial effects of this wonderful medicine.

IMPORTANCE OF HAVING DAVIS' PAIN KILLER ALWAYS ON HAND.

Extract from his letter, published in the Baptist Missionary Magazine:

"For the first time since I have been in India, I have been stung by a scorpion. I went out this morning to my exercises, as usual, at early dawn, and having occasion to use an old box, on taking off the cover I put my hand on a scorpion, which immediately resented the insult by thrusting its sting into the palm of my hand. The instantaneous and severe pain which darted through the system is quite incredible; what an awful virulent pain their sting must contain! I flew to my bottle of DAVIS' PAIN KILLER, and found it to be true to its name; after a few moments' relief, I saturated a small piece of sponge, bound it on my hand, and went about for exercise, feeling no more particular inconvenience."

Birdie's Song

BY ALICE CARY

As it never would shine on it
But I'll sing my wallet over my back, &c
And I'll sing a smile all through it.

And if there rise no star to guide
My feet when day is gone,
I'll walk on without the other side
And think right on and on

For this of a truth, I always note,
And shape my course thereby,
That Nature does never an overcoat
To keep her furrows dry

And how shall the hills be clothed with grain
The vales with flowers be crowned,
But for the chain of the silver rain
That draws them out of the ground?

So I will trudge with heart slate,
And face with courage stout,
For that which men call Chance and Fate
Is the handiwork of God

There's a time for the night as well as the morn
For the dark as the shining sky,
The grain of the corn and the flower unborn
Have rights as well as I

An Adventure in Russia.

[From "Once a Week."]

I resided in Russia for many years, and I must in justice say that I thoroughly enjoyed my life in its capital. Business succeeded well, my speculations prospered, my wealth was accumulating rapidly, and I felt that there was no extravagance in having luxuries, nor in my allowing my family to enjoy them. We entered freely into society, and the Russians always treated us with the greatest kindness. Our children were growing up, the eldest had been educated in London, and had spent her holidays at her grandfather's in Kent. A short time before we had been surprised by learning that she had formed an attachment with a young neighbor of theirs, of good character.

As the season was almost too advanced for traveling, the young people petitioned that they might be married in England, and we at last consented, with the proviso that they were to pay us a visit in the following spring. I need not, however, dwell upon our family. The night I speak of was in the depth of winter. Everything was freezing, and only Russians or Canadians would dream of parties in such weather; but it was the height of the season in St. Petersburgh, and the party we gave that evening was expected to go off brilliantly. Our friends were invited to come in masquerade, and we begged our intimates to try and disguise themselves effectually. Our rooms were already crowded when a stranger, or at least a strange figure, addressed me, saying he was obliged to leave early, and he trusted I would follow his example in returning home, he hoped he should not see me again.

I was astonished by the odd address. At first I thought that he must have imbibed too freely of the sparkling wines in the refreshment rooms, but then I remembered that they would hardly have been opened. Just then Count Vladimor came up and put his hand upon my shoulder, saying—

"I should scarcely trouble to carry a mask in my hand, if I were you, for every one has seen your face, so you cannot disguise yourself, even if you put it on. Pray! why are you looking so mystified?"

I repeated the words of my visitor, and said I could no longer them, although I knew they were of no consequence.

"I disagree with you," remarked my friend. "Those words must have been intended for a warning. I know that you have done many kindnesses to our people, and one of them has wished to put you on your guard."

"Oh! nonsense," I answered; but the Count persisted. He reminded me that he had known and liked me for years, and he earnestly begged me to act upon the warning. At any rate, if he found that there were grounds for his suspicions, that I would promise to act upon his advice.

"Very well," I said, and turned away.

In half an hour's time I met my friend, who whispered that he wished me to join him in the library, which we found deserted.

"My fears have been corroborated," said the Count, "you are suspected, and will be seized to-morrow, or at any moment, if you show signs of departure. You must quit St Petersburg to-night."

"Nonsense," I again repeated, you do not suppose that I will leave my wife and children on the whispered joke of some scoundrel, perhaps!"

"I do not wish you to leave your wife and children," answered my friend; "take them with you, or possibly you may all be on the road to Siberia before you are aware, and it will be small comfort to you to know that you have done nothing wrong and that perhaps in twenty years' time you may be acquitted. Be warned in time by a sincere well-wisher."

The Count's arguments had some effect, and I inquired what had best be done.

"Exchange dresses with me," was the answer. "Let first order your people to pack a hamper full of eatables on the plea of a surprise for my children, and manage to have both wine and brandy included; then quietly tell your wife to collect her valuables, and conceal them upon her person—she fortunately is wearing her diamonds, then return, and we will change dresses."

This was soon done. My wife was one of those valuable women who could take a hint without stunning one with questions. Meanwhile, I personated Vladimor as well as I was able, wearing the mask tightly fastened as you may suppose.

The next time we met my kind friend told me that his carriage was fortunately both warm and large, and well supplied with furs, as they had had a long drive from their country-seat. He thought our best plan would be to enter it as if we were leaving the party, get fresh horses at Iverskoy, and reach the frontiers with speed; whilst he and his wife would personate us as long as they could.

"But if there is any risk, you will be more likely to suffer than a foreigner."

"Pardon me," he answered, "the Countess is nearly connected with the Empress, and a favorite at Court, and they could not allege that we had done anything worthy of blame, for surely you might pay us a visit in the country without committing treason; and I could aver on oath, that I had no suspicion that you had been guilty of any crime likely to drive you from the country. On second thoughts, I think you had better leave your youngest child behind; she is too young to bear the journey, and I will promise that my wife will take the greatest care of him, and now prepare your family with all haste."

I need scarcely say that Count Vladimor spoke English fluently, as compared with most of the Russians, and he acted the part of host hospitably, whilst I persuaded the girls that we intended to carry on the joke of our disguise, and would try and take the servants in when we arrived at Iverskoy, the country seat of Count Vladimor. My daughters were fortunately dressed as Poles, and their sable pelisses, which early in the evening they had deemed to be nuisances, were well qualified for a journey, and a large domino concealed effectually the thick, heavy shawls which scarcely suited the embroidered velvet dress of my wife.

I lost no time in explaining matters to my family. My daughters could not believe their ears, whilst my wife seemed drowned in sorrow that her darling Charley should be left to the mercy of Russian barbarians.

My thoughtful friend had furnished me with a note to his confidential attendant, and no sooner was it read than he left me, whilst we recruited ourselves on the hot supper prepared for his master. On his return he urged us to start directly. The ladies were wrapped still more warmly in furs and hoods, whilst I had an immense fur coat assigned to me, the outside being of sheepskin. Emily, my youngest daughter, declared that I looked exactly like a polar bear raised upon his hind legs. But to our dismay we found that our extra wraps had so increased our size, that it was next to impossible to wedge myself into the carriage. What was to be done? I began to take off my coat, but Vassilowitch objected—

"I would be sure to require it. Besides," he added, "would it not cause remarks to see a carriage crowded to that extent with lords and ladies, and no servant to attend upon them? Could not my lord attempt to personate a servant, and stay outside the carriage?"

To this I agreed willingly. Vassilowitch told me that I would find pipes, tobacco and cigars in the bumper beneath the seat, and a few other things which I might require.

At last we were off at a rattling pace. The Count's horses were first rate, and they were well driven, but the night grew colder and colder. Anxiety of mind seemed to have deadened my external feelings, and I only dreaded the want of horses. Imagine my delight when we arrived at the post stage to find four horses in readiness. The Count had ordered one of his people to ride on, and gave notice of our coming upon business of importance. I now had recourse to the cigars beneath the seat, and a small lantern showed me a most heterogeneous mass of articles, a brace of pistols and ammunition were amongst the number, and thankful I was to see them, as I was determined to sell my life dearly if we were pursued.

We continued our journey during the following day, the weather continuing fine though cold. A great deal of snow had fallen during the last week, and the roads were heavy in consequence, towards night the wind began to moan in a threatening manner. At the post house we were very strongly recommended to remain all night, as the next stage was frequented by wolves, and the man keeper told us that several oxen had suffered from them though he did not think that they would dare a fast a carriage. Time was too precious for us to spare it for rest, so I said we must continue our journey at all risks. Dispatches of consequence were in the carriage. We hurried on for the wolves were on all sides, making the most horrid noise.

We made but slow progress. At last, we came to a full stop. I disentangled myself as well as I was able, from all my furs and jumped to the ground. A tree had fallen down across the narrow road. The driver thought we might be able to lift it, but we found that it was frozen to the ground. Ivan then got a hatchet and began to cut the top away. I saw that this must be a tedious business, and trembled for the result. The wolves seemed to be creeping nearer and nearer and they might attack our horses at any moment. I took the hatchet from Ivan's hands, and begged him to look after his cattle, but I had soon to relinquish it that I might answer the questions of the women. One of them was sure that wolves were near.

"I am afraid so," was my reply, "that is the reason we are so hurried about the tree, if we can only keep them at a distance till the passage is free, I have no fear."

"Make a fire," cried one of the girls; "that is the way to frighten lions and tigers."

"Yes, but lions and tigers usually reside in hot countries where sticks are dry," answered I, "but I will speak to our driver about it."

I found him holding with difficulty the startled and frightened animals and inquired whether a fire would be practicable.

"The best thing that could be done," said he, "get everything you can spare from the carriage and if you once get a blaze, the tree tops may kindle."

On telling the ladies, I found they were determined to be useful, so I left it to them, and worked hard at the tree, whilst Ivan instructed my daughters, the lid of a box and some straw were soon ignited, and not a bit too soon. The wolves had drawn so near that we could hear them snarling as they hustled one another. But my work was nearly done, the horses were fastened strongly to the trees, and Ivan assisted me in lifting the wood.

When once the road was clear, we started, my wife had given Ivan a bottle of brandy, and put another on my seat, and much we needed it, for the cold was intense. Before long the drivers told me that one of the horses was lame, he could not keep up with the others. As our speed diminished, our enemies crept nearer. I thought of the mask. I had kicked it under the seat, and I remembered the schoolboy dodge of cutting out a turnip and frightening one's friends by putting a light within it. My little lantern would be the very thing. I fastened it into the mask, and waited till the wolves drew near, then threw it in front of them. The half starved brutes were startled they could not make it out. The mask had fortunately fallen so that the light shone through the eyes and mouth, and I saw them stop, the foremost went up to it, but seemed afraid to touch it. But the wolves in the rear were impatient, and pushed the others on; one fell upon the mask, and evidently crushed the lantern, for the light went out, and again the wretches were in pursuit.

"We cannot be saved," said Ivan at length, "unless you can think of something else."

"If I had but a rope," I shouted, "I might do something."

"Then catch this," he answered and threw a good sized piece over the top of the carriage. "I brought it in case the harness broke."

I pulled off my long boot, which was lined with sheepskin, with a band of fur round the top, and prayed as I fastened the rope securely around the instep that our hungry foes might mistake it for a trap. If then throw it over, and had the pleasure of seeing it bump most satisfactorily along, the wolves keeping at a respectful distance. This continued for a minute or two, and then our lame horse fell.

"We must leave him," cried Ivan jumping down as he spoke, and I followed his example, cutting the harness with our knives.

"Have your pistols ready," said the Russian, "whilst I fasten the traces—the wolves are upon us."

And so it was. My boot no longer served to frighten them. It now lay quiet on the snow, and I had just time to turn and shoot the foremost as he was making a spring.

"Mount!" shouted our driver, and I sprang on to the step, managing to shoot an ominous wolf who was running at one of the horses.

"We are free now," I said to Ivan, "the wolves will surely remain with the lame horse."

"Yes, I think we are," he answered, "but load your pistols; if we do not reach the post-house before they overtake us, we shall find them more savage than ever, that poor brute will not be a mouthful for each of them."

But at the edge of the wood we saw the walls of the post-house, just as the pack rushed into the brighter light. They felt they were foiled, and shrank away, howling dismally. As to the ladies, they were really more dead than alive when we all agreed that we must take an hour's rest before we started.

As we reached the frontier another doubt arose. Our passports were en regle, but had them only for myself and for my wife, and for my daughter; they had been made out when we talked of joining my eldest daughter and her husband in Paris; and they were likely to be of service, but how was I to manage about Emma and Caroline? After some deliberation, I decided on consulting our driver, who had behaved so well on our escape from the wolves. So telling the ladies that they might have a short rest at a comfortable post house which he had reached, I joined Ivan, offering him a share of my brandy bottle, and asked if he not been long in the service of Count Vladimor.

"I am a serf, born on his land," was his reply, "and my father was before me."

"Is he not a good master?" I inquired.

"He is, indeed, my lord," for so he persisted in calling me. "Ah! if all vassals were so fortunate as I have been, Russia would be a different country from what it is."

I said I believed his master trusted him, and I would do the same. I wanted to know what I had best do, as I had not passports for two of my daughters, and I dared not apply to the officials of the frontier towns.

"I fear you would not be allowed to pass," he said, "but could not you get them across the river Memel, and then pick them up after going through the nearest town?"

"How do you mean?" I inquired.

"When we get near to Meretch," Ivan answered, "I could turn aside, for I know the part quite well. The river must be frozen hard at this time, and I or my lord might take the young ladies over, leave them at a cottage close to the banks of the Memel, and then return to the carriage and drive to Meretch, where you can show your papers."

The plan I deemed feasible, although the idea of leaving the two young girls at the mercy of strangers, was repugnant to my feelings. But when I told my daughters about it, they both declared that they had no fear, and that they would much rather cross the ice than be detained perhaps for weeks at Meretch.

On the banks of the river another difficulty arose. There was no passport for Ivan, and yet we were most unwilling to part from him.

"My lord must condescend to act as driver," said Ivan, "and I can see the young ladies across the river, and protect them from danger if necessary. Or I can stay with the carriage, and on arriving at Meretch pretend to return to St Petersburgh, and seize the first opportunity of crossing the river.

The last plan would have taken too much time, so I told him we felt full confidence in him, and promised him a handsome reward if we reached Paris in safety, and so we parted.

We had not much trouble at Meretch. When I produced my passports, I said my business was of importance, an hour saved was sometimes worth a fortune to a merchant like me, and if the official would kindly assist me by paying any dues that were required, I should feel everlastingly indebted to him. So saying, I slipped a bag of money into his willing fingers. He gave a look of intelligence, glanced at my passports, and begged me not to dismount—there should not be a hindrance if he had the power to prevent it.

When out of the town my heart bounded. We were once more free! I trusted to join the girls in an hour or so, and lost no time on the road, but the path was a widening one, and there were numerous cross roads, however, I took the river as my guide, and in course of time we reached a cottage, but could hear nothing of our little party. I further on, we met an old woman, who made us understand that she had seen two girls whom a Russian was taking before the authorities, as he feared they were spies. "But they looked both good and modest, and my heart ached for them," she added with a sigh. After giving her a trifle we hastened on, and soon overtook my weary children. Ivan had seen some military resting in the cottage when he peeped in through the narrow window, and feared that unpleasant inquiries might be made, so he concealed this story, which he was sure would win the heart of any peasant.

The girls told me that the poor woman had been very kind, she had brought them back bread and cheese in her apron, and with from her little slavy, though Ivan pretended he could not allow them to stop and rest. My daughters said that they never would forget his kindness and thought fulness, and, indeed, he has proved a most faithful servant he is now my gamekeeper at ——. His master thought it would scarcely be prudent to return to Vladimor.

A day later I could not have left the Capital, for I should have been in prison, for the authorities had heard that I was connected with the English press. Nothing could be so absurd, out such is Russia.

This is to certify that I John B. Jodwan was blind for over nine years, and I tried all means of a cure, and in my doctors and all of no effect, and I spent all the means I had. Finally, I had to be taken a county charge, and when I was taken to Dr. G. W. Brown and stated my case to him and misfortune, he at once commenced to treat my eyes, and now I am well and can mend all those that are suffering with diseases of the eyes to call on Dr. G. W. Brown. The reason why I did not like to let suffering humanity know it was because they can be cured. J. B. JODWAN

This is to certify that my daughter was almost blind for over seven years, and was doctored by other physicians without obtaining any relief, when finally I took her to Dr. G. W. Brown who examined her case, and at once began to give her treatment, and her sight has been entirely restored. I do this to let those who are suffering with diseases of the eyes know where they can obtain a cure. It has been three years since her eyes were cured, and they are yet sound.

SALEM July 21 1866

This is to certify that I was blind for over four months and almost blind for one year and a half, and received several eye doctors but to no benefit. I had given up all hopes, my case up as hopeless when fortunately I heard of Dr. G. W. Brown now of Salem. I was induced to try him; he performed a surgical operation on my eyes, and gave me treatment. I soon began to recover, and in a short time I was perfectly cured. I do this in justice to one who rescued me from a fate worse than death, and also for the benefit of those who are laboring under similar afflictions that they may know where they can get relief. It is now about eight months since my eyes were cured and they still remain good. I can read the finest print without difficulty and my eyes can bear the strongest light without pain.

To Soldiers Claiming Bounties

UNDER THE

EQUALIZATION BOUNTY BILL!

THE UNDERSIGNED, HAVING RECENTLY returned from Washington City, where he has made the proper arrangements for the collections of the Extra Bounty of $100 allowed to all soldiers entisted after the 19th day of April 1861 for a period of not less than three years and $50 for soldiers enlisted for a period of not less than two years.

Persons entitled to the benefits of said Bounty will find it to their interest to attend to its collection at once. Having an Agent at Washington, and personal knowledge of the mode of making collections through the Departments, I can get claims promptly.

☞ Call with your Discharge, and two witnesses for identification, at the Publication Office of the Daily Oregonian, No. 5 Washington St., Portland.

A. BUSHWILER.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE PAYMENT OF BOUNTIES, UNDER THE ACT TO EQUALIZE BOUNTIES, APPROVED JULY 28 1866.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, September 10, 1866.

1. All applications shall be filed within the period of six months, from the 1st day of October, 1866, and before any payment shall be made, the Rolls of the Regiments, Batteries, or other separate organizations, and no application filed after that period shall be settled until after the former shall have been paid.

2. No application shall be entertained unless accompanied by the original Certificate of Discharge and the affidavit required by the fourteenth section of the Act, and the further affidavit that he has not received, nor is he entitled to receive from the United States, under any laws or regulations prior to the Act of July 28, 1866, more than $100 bounty for any and all previous service rendered by him during the late rebellion, over and above the amount therein claimed.

3. All applications for the additional bounty authorized by this Act from surviving soldiers shall be in the form hereinafter prescribed and the evidence of identity shall be the same as is now required on applications from the heirs of deceased soldiers shall be in the form now required by the Treasury Department.

4. As soon as the examination of the claims of any regiment, or other independent organization, shall have been properly acted upon the Paymaster General shall take the necessary steps for their prompt payment.

A register shall be kept in the Paymaster General's office and also in the office of the Second Auditor of all claims presented under the law in which the claimants will be classified by regiments, etc. If the claims be allowed, the amount of bounty paid to each will be noted, and if rejected the cause of rejection will be distinctly stated.

6. In the applications for bounty, as required by the third of these rules, the soldiers shall state each and every period of service rendered by the claimant, and also that he never served otherwise than as he has stated.

7. Organizations irregularly in the service of the United States or called out for special purposes as State Militia, Home Guards etc. and not included in the general bounty laws, are not included within the meaning of the Act.

8. Soldiers enlisted for "three years or during the war," who were discharged by reason of the termination of the war shall be considered as having served out the period of their enlistment, and are entitled to bounty under this Act.

9. The minority of heirs, claimants for bounty under this Act, must be proven to have existed at the date of its passage. Parents shall receive jointly the bounty to which they may be entitled as heirs, unless the latter has abandoned the support of his family, by which case it shall be paid to the mother. Non-residence in the United States shall not be a bar to the claim of heirs, who would otherwise legally inherit.

The provisions of the Act exclude from its benefits the following classes:

1. Those who after serving the full period of their enlistment, were dishonorably discharged at its expiration.

2. Those discharged during enlistment by way of favor or punishment.

3. Those discharged on account of disability contracted in the service but not occasioned by wounds received in the line of duty, who shall have previously served two or three years respectively at the time of discharge.

4. Those discharged on account of disability existing at the time of their enlistment.

5. The heirs of those who have died since their discharge of wounds or disease not contracted in the service and in the line of duty.

6. The surviving soldiers and heirs of deceased soldiers who under previous laws have received or are entitled to receive a bounty of more than $100 from the United States.

7. The surviving soldiers, as well as the heirs of deceased soldiers, whom such soldiers have thereto sold assigned, loaned, transferred exchanged or given away their final claim, large papers, or any interest in the bounty provided by this or any other Act of Congress.

8. The Act of the 28th of July 1866, creates no right of inheritance beyond those vested by the laws under which it was framed or were entitled to receive through the kindred and relationship claimed. Brothers and sisters of heirs that were entitled to receive the original bounty from any claim for the additional bounty provided by this Act.

Respectfully referred to the Attorney General for his opinion on the point whether the rules and regulations as within mentioned are in conformity with law.

EDWIN M. STANTON
Secretary of War

September 14 1866.

I have examined these an enclosed regulations, and am of opinion they are in conformity with law.
